Illinois Treasurer Michael Frerichs Honored With College Savings Distinguished Service Award

Industry's Highest National Honor Given for Leadership, Bipartisanship

SPRINGFIELD – A national organization of college savings plans today recognized Illinois State Treasurer Michael Frerichs with its highest honor.

The College Savings Plans Network \(CSPN\), the national network of 529 plans, states, and private-sector partners, honored Frerichs with the Distinguished Service Award.

The award is the highest honor bestowed by CSPN and is given each year to those who have shown national leadership in the college savings industry. Past award winners include U.S. senators from both parties such as Florida Sen. Bob Graham and Iowa Sen. Chuck Grassley; state treasurers; and prominent leaders of 529 college savings plans.

“Treasurer Frerichs’ sincere desire to chart the future course of the College Savings Plans Network by making CSPN a more data-driven organization, and his collaboration on initiatives to promote new leaders and members within the Network are commendable,” said Rachel Biar, Chair of the College Savings Plans Network and Assistant State Treasurer of Nebraska. “This award is a testament to Treasurer Frerichs’ commitment, leadership and service to CSPN.”

“When you use common sense, work together and focus on solutions, good things happen,” Frerichs said. “We are doing good work in this space, helping families save for college or helping them pursue a career in the trades, and I look forward to continued cooperation and success.”

Frerichs was elected Chair of the College Savings Plan Network in January 2020 and re-elected in 2021. As CSPN Chair, Frerichs advocated for recent federal reforms that eliminated 529 funds from consideration for Pell Grants for families earning less than $60,000 annually.
